When making sausage using game meat, it is important to get the correct amount of fat mixed into the game meat. When choosing what you will mix with the game meat, keep this in mind - while the ratio of the animals will create a flavor profile, it is the fat to lean ratio that makes good sausage. The type of meat you are going to use to get that fat will require different ratios.

For example, when using pure fat, you need less than if you are using meat cuts that have both lean and fat. So, fat can be added by:

- Using pure fat
- Using trimmings that contains some lean meat
- Using meat that is mostly lean like pork butts, shoulders and beef brisket / roasts.

The chart below breaks down, by the pound, the different types of meat to add to your game to get a good fat to lean ratio. Weight your game meat and use chart to determine the amount of added meat you need.

Game Meat	If Using Pure Fat	If Using Trimmings	If Using Pork Shoulders	If Using Pork Butts	If Using Beef Brisket
In Lbs.	Mix 80% Game 20% Fat	Mix 75% Game 25% Trimmings	Mix 60% Game 40% Shoulders	Mix 50% Game 50% Butt	Mix 50% Game 50% Brisket
